

Contributors

Patrik Aspers was born 1970, and has studied sociology at Stockholm University, where he graduated 2001. Currently, he is research fellow at the Department of Sociology, Stockholm University. He has been visiting academic at Harvard, Leipzig and Columbia University, and the London School of Economics. He has been the editor of Electronic Newsletter: European Economic Sociology, and co-chair of the Economic Sociology Research Network of European Sociological Association. His research focuses on economic sociology, especially markets. A previous study, on the aesthetic markets for fashion photographers, will be published in year 2005: Markets in Fashion, A Phenomenological Approach (Routledge). He is also interested in sociological theory and visual sociology. The chapter in this anthology is part of a larger research project on global garment markets.

E-mail: patrik.aspers@sociology.su.se

Thomas Beschorner is head of the research group “Social Learning and Sustainability,” Oldenburg University, Germany. He has studied Economics and Management at University of Kassel, the National University of Ireland, the Max-Weber-Center for Cultural and Social Studies, University of Erfurt (Ph. D.), and – as a post doc student – at Concordia University in Montreal. The Ph.D. thesis has been published in 2002 on “Economics as Theory of Action” (in German). In 2000, he founded the now leading German scientific Journal for Business, Economics & Ethics/Zeitschrift für Wirtschafts- und Unternehmensethik and has been its co-editor ever since. He recently edited two books on “Theory of the Firm and Cultural Studies” and on “Integrity and Value Management” (both in German, 2004). Thomas Beschorner is currently visiting fellow at the Centre de Recherche en Éthique de l’Université de Montréal (CREUM). The main fields of interest are: theory of action, institutionalism, evolutionary economics, theory of the firm, corporate environmental management, ecological economics, business and economics ethics, and cultural studies.

E-mail: thomas.beschorner@uni-oldenburg.de

Web: <http://222.uni-oldenburg.de/ute>

Jens Beckert was born in Frankfurt/M. and studied sociology and business administration at the Freie Universität Berlin and the New School for Social Research in New York. He received his Ph.D. in sociology from the Freie Universität in 1996 and his Habilitation in 2003. Beckert was a visiting fellow at the sociology department of Princeton University in 1994/95 and is a member of the Junge Akademie. He was Associate Professor of sociology at the newly founded International University Bremen (2001-2002). Currently he is Professor of sociology at the Georg-August-University Göttingen. His book Beyond the Market, The Social Foundations of Economic Efficiency was published by Princeton University Press in 2002. Other publications include: "Kunst und Preise. Reputation als Mechanismus der Reduktion von Ungewissheit am Kunstmarkt." Kölner Zeitschrift für Soziologie und Sozialpsychologie 56 (2004): 32-50 (together with Jörg Rössel); "Economic Sociology and Embeddedness. How Shall We Conceptualize Economic Action?" Journal of Economic Issues 37 (2003): 769-787; "Vertrauen und die performative Konstruktion von Märkten." Zeitschrift für Soziologie 31 (2002): 27-43; "What is Sociological about Economic Sociology? Uncertainty and the Embeddedness of Economic Action." Theory and Society 25 (1996): 803-840.
E-mail: jbeckert@gwdg.de

Colin Campbell is professor of sociology at the University of York, England. He is the author of The Romantic Ethic and the Spirit of Modern Consumerism (Blackwell, 1987) and co-editor of The Shopping Experience (with Pasi Falk, Sage, 1997). He has published extensively on the sociology of religion, cultural change, and sociological theory, as well as the sociology of consumption. His latest publication on the latter topic is "I Shop Therefore I Know That I Am: The Metaphysical Foundations of Modern Consumerism," in Elusive Consumption, ed. Karin Ekstrom and Helen Brembeck (Berg, 2004).
E-mail: Cbc3@york.ac.uk

Paul du Gay is Professor of Sociology and Organization Studies in the Faculty of Social Sciences at the Open University, Walton Hall, UK, and Co-Director of the Centre for Citizenship, Identities and Governance. His recent publications include In Praise of Bureaucracy: Weber/Organization/Ethics (Sage, 2001), and Cultural Economy (ed. with M. Pryke, Sage, 2002). The Values of Bureaucracy will be published with Oxford University Press in 2005.
E-mail: P.L.J.Dugay@open.ac.uk

Reiner Grundmann studied sociology at the Free University in Berlin and obtained his PhD in Political and Social Sciences from the European University Institute, Florence. He was with the Wissenschaftszentrum in Berlin (Germany) and the Max Planck Institute for the Study of Societies (Cologne, Germany). Currently he is a Senior Lecturer at Aston University, Birmingham, UK, teaching sociology within the School of Languages and Social Sciences. His main research interests are social and political theory, and the sociology of science, technology, risk and the environment. Book publications include Marxism and Ecology (1991), and Transnational Environmental Policy: Reconstructing Ozone (2001). Currently he is working on two topics: cross country comparisons of global environmental problems and policies, especially climate change, and the role of knowledge for modern politics. He is co-editor of the five volume Knowledge: Critical Concepts (Routledge, forthcoming) and works on a book manuscript (together with Nico Stehr) The Power of Knowledge.

E-mail: r.grundmann@aston.ac.uk

Steve Fuller is Professor of Sociology at the University of Warwick, England. He was awarded a Ph.D. in History and Philosophy of Science, University of Pittsburgh (1985). Fuller has been a Visiting Professor at UCLA, Gothenburg University, Lund University, Copenhagen Business School, Tel Aviv University, and Tokyo International Christian University. In 1987, he founded the quarterly journal Social Epistemology (Taylor & Francis). Fuller is the author of about 150 articles, which have appeared in over a dozen languages, and the author of ten books: Social Epistemology (Indiana, 1988, 2nd ed. 2002); Philosophy of Science and Its Discontents (Westview, 1989; 2nd ed., Guilford, 1993); Philosophy, Rhetoric and the End of Knowledge (Wisconsin, 1993; 2nd ed., Lawrence Erlbaum, 2004); Science (Open University and Minnesota, 1997); The Governance of Science (Open University, 2000); Thomas Kuhn: A Philosophical History for Our Times (Chicago, 2000); Knowledge Management Foundations (Butterworth-Heinemann, 2002); Kuhn vs. Popper: The Struggle for the Soul of Science (Icon and Columbia, 2003); The Intellectual (Icon, 2005); and The Philosophy of Science and Technology Studies (Routledge, 2005). He is currently finishing Re-Imagining Sociology (Sage, 2005).
E-mail: s.w.fuller@warwick.ac.uk

Christoph Henning studied philosophy, sociology, musicology and political economy in Dresden, Berlin, and New York. He received his M.A. (1999) and Ph.D. (2003) in Philosophy from the TU Dresden, Germany. His main interests are social philosophy, especially critical theory, aesthetics, the history of ideas and cultural sociology. He is currently a fellow at the Zeppelin University in Friedrichshafen, Germany, where he is working with Nico Stehr. A book on the impact of Karl Marx on social theory and philosophy (Philosophy after Marx) is forthcoming in German in 2005.

E-mail: chenning@zeppelin-university.de

J. Rogers Hollingsworth is Professor of Sociology and History at the University of Wisconsin. Awarded honorary degrees by the University of Uppsala (Sweden) and by Emory University, he is the author or editor of numerous books and articles on comparative political economy. One of his major research interests is the study of how organizational and institutional factors influence different types of innovations. His recent publications include Advancing Socio-Economics (with Karl Müller and Ellen Jane Hollingsworth, 2002); Contemporary Capitalism: The Embeddedness of Institutions (with Robert Boyer, 1997); Governing Capitalist Economies (with Philippe Schmitter and Wolfgang Streeck, 1994); and The Search for Excellence: Organizations, Institutions, and Major Discoveries in Biomedical Science (with Ellen Jane Hollingsworth and Jerald Hage, forthcoming 2005). He is past President and also Honorary Fellow of the Society for the Advancement of Socio Economics.

E-mail: Hollingsjr@aol.com

Paulette Kurzer is professor of political science at the University of Arizona in Tucson, Arizona. Her research interests include institutions of the European Union and the intersection between domestic and European policy-making. Her work has appeared in the Journal for European Public Policy, Journal of Common Market Studies, and other refereed journals, as well as several edited volumes. Her most recent book is Markets and Moral Regulation (Cambridge University Press, 2001). She is currently working on the perception of risk and the formation of a new public health domain in the European Union.

E-mail: kurzer@arizona.edu

Lars Osberg is currently the McCulloch Professor of Economics at Dalhousie University, but he began life in Ottawa, Ontario. As an undergraduate, he attended Queen's University, Kingston and the London School of Economics and Political Science. After serving as a CUSO volunteer in Tanzania, he went to Yale University for his Ph.D. His first book was Economic Inequality in Canada (1981), and the most recent one is The Economic Implications of Social Cohesion (2003). In between there have been eight others and an introductory text. He is also the author of numerous refereed articles, book chapters, reviews, reports and miscellaneous publications. His major fields of research interest have been the extent and causes of poverty and economic inequality, with particular emphasis in recent years on indices of economic well being, social cohesion and the implications of unemployment and structural change in labour markets. Among other professional responsibilities, he was President of the Canadian Economics Association in 1999-2000, and is currently Review Editor for the Review of Income and Wealth and a member of the Executive Council of the International Association for Research in Income and Wealth. E-mail: lars.osberg@dal.ca

Arnaud Sales holds a Doctorat d'État ès Lettres et Sciences Humaines (Sociology) from the Université de Paris VII Denis-Diderot, France. He has been a Full Professor in the Department of Sociology at the Université de Montréal since 1984, and has chaired the department since June 2000. From 1987 to 1992, he was Vice-Dean of Humanities and Social Sciences in the Faculty of Graduate Studies. As Vice-President of the International Sociological Association between 1998 and 2002, he chaired the Association's Research Council. A specialist in Economic Sociology, his work is focused on: 1) the interface of the political and economic domains, particularly the relations between the public and private sectors; 2) elites and highly qualified personnel; 3) social transformations, particularly the present role of knowledge in social change. He has also conducted regular research on the situation of the French language. Included among his recent works are New Directions in the Study of Knowledge, Economy and Society, edited with Kamini Adhikari, and published by Sage Series in International Sociology/Current Sociology (2001), and the International Handbook of Sociology, edited with Stella Quah (SAGE Publications, 2000). He is currently working with Marcel Fournier on a book entitled Knowledge, Communication and Creativity, to be published by SAGE in 2005. E-mail: Arnaud.Sales@umontreal.ca

Andrew Sayer is Professor of Social Theory and Political Economy in the Department of Sociology, Lancaster University, U.K. His main work has been in two areas: political economy, industry and space, and philosophy and methodology of social science, especially critical realism. His publications in the former area include Microcircuits of Capital (Polity, 1988, with K. J. Morgan); The New Social Economy (Blackwell, 1992, with R. A. Walker); Radical Political Economy: A Critique (Blackwell, 1995); Culture and Economy after the Cultural Turn (Sage, ed. With L. J. Ray); and in the latter area, Method in Social Science: A Realist Approach (1992, 2nd ed., Routledge), and Realism and Social Science (Sage, 2000). He is currently holder of an Economic and Social Science Research Council fellowship and is working on books on the moral significance of class, and on moral economy. E-mail: a.sayer@lancaster.ac.uk

Barry Smart has worked in universities in Australia, England, Japan and New Zealand. He is currently Professor of Sociology at the University of Portsmouth. He is the author of a number of books including most recently Facing Modernity (Sage, 1999); and Economy, Culture and Society: A Sociological Critique of Neo-liberalism (Open University Press, 2003). He is the editor of Resisting McDonaldization (Sage, 1999) and co-editor (with George Ritzer) of the Handbook of Social Theory (Sage, 2001). His latest book is The Sports Star: The cultural Economy of Sporting Celebrity (Sage, forthcoming).
barry.smart@port.ac.uk

Nico Stehr is Karl Mannheim Professor of Cultural Studies at the Zeppelin University, Friedrichshafen, Germany. During the academic year 2002/2003 we was Paul-F.-Lazarsfeld Professor at the University of Vienna, Austria. His research interests center on the transformation of modern societies into a knowledge societies, and the uses of social and natural science knowledge. Among his recent book publications are Governing Modern Societies (with Richard Ericson, University of Toronto Press, 2000); The Fragility of Modern Societies: Knowledge and Risk in the Information Age (Sage, 2001); Knowledge and Economic Conduct: The Social Foundations of the Modern Economy (University of Toronto Press, 2002); The Governance of Knowledge (Transaction Books, 2004); Biotechnology: Between Commerce and Civil Society (Transaction Books, 2004); Knowledge Politics: Governing the Consequences of Science and Technology (Paradigm Publishers, 2004) and Knowledge (Routledge, 2005).

E-mail: Nico.Stehr@t-online.de

Steven Peter Vallas is a sociologist of work and organizations who also writes on questions involving theory and culture. He has written or edited three books, including Power in the Workplace: The Politics of Production at AT&T and The Nature of Work (co-edited with Kai Erikson). He has studied both high-tech industries (telecommunications, biotechnology) as well as manufacturing (forest products), focusing on the advent of new production concepts, the nature of post-Fordism, as well as the structure/agency question within work organizations. His recent articles have appeared in such journals as the American Sociological Review, Theory and Society, Sociological Theory, and Social Problems, among many others. He is currently finishing an ethnographic study of American industrial workers and their modes of responding to new managerial imperatives. Previously at the Georgia Institute of Technology, he now chairs the Department of Sociology and Anthropology at George Mason University in Fairfax, Virginia.

E-mail: Vallas@aol.com

Bernd Weiler studied sociology at the University of Saskatchewan, Saskatoon, Canada, and at the University of Graz, Austria. He is a fellow at the Karl-Mannheim-Chair for Cultural Sciences at Zeppelin University, Friedrichshafen, Germany. His research interests center on the intellectual history of the cultural sciences, the sociology of knowledge and the sociology of migration. He is currently working on a book about the history of the idea of progress in modern anthropology.

E-mail: bweiler@zeppelin-university.de

